Arrested Man Who Was Virtually Identified in Court as Slayer, County
Released Him.
AVAILABLE WITNESS
NOT SUMMONED
No Effort Made to Solve
Mystery When Clews
Were Fresh Eight Years Ago—Case to Be Reopened.
A striking contrast between the efficiency of county police agencies and the diligence of the St. Louis Police Department in connection with the murder of Deputy Constable Edward P. Neu on April 2, 1923, is revealed by the further investigation of the case by the Post-Dispatch since its publication on July 30 of evidence showing that the officer was killed by Egan gangsters who had robbed a mail truck in St. Louis on the preceding day.
Neu, a motor cycle officer, was shot down when he stopped five or six men in a car on Gravois road.
Wounded in the body and unable to move, he was then shot in the face by one of the men, and died in a parish house in the St. Louis black belt, a few feet from the scene, while his slayers made good their escape.
Later, it was established that the Cadillac automobile abandoned by the slayers was the car used in the robbery of a mail truck at Fourth and Locust streets.
Probable Reason for Murder.
From testimony at a subsequent trial in which eight Egan gangsters
were sentenced to prison
terms for the robbery, it developed that the robbers, in all probability,
were not the mail truck, but a ride-along car, which was used to transport the mail truck. The Robbers, who were identified as William of St. Louis County made a brief investigation of the murder which developed nothing of value to them in the solution of the crime. Although the shooting had occurred out of its jurisdiction, the St. Louis Police Department also had detectives at the scene of the murder soon after Neu died. The mail roundup of gunmen was made by the city police but no
clues were developed.
After a few days, a city policeman learned through an informant that a young man had told a woman
he was in the party that murdered
Neu. The woman, a quick investigator, resulted in the arrest of Joseph Buselack, a shoe-worker, who told a circumstantial
story of shooting and implicated
the young Sicilians, several of them known gangsters, as his companions and the slayers of Neu.
Warnings were issued, but later were dismissed when it developed that Buselack was undeveloped and had concocted the story to win the favor of the woman to whom he told it.
Ray Renard's Story.
Detectives worked intermittently on the case until the first trial of eight Egan gangsters, 18 months later in November, 1924, for the mail truck robbery. Here Ray Renard, once an active figure in the gang, made his first appearance as a government witness in the case and made possible the series of trials in which postoffice inspectors broke the backbone of the Egan gang. Renard's testimony at that trial, which resulted in a mistrial because the jury could not agree, implicated Ray Tipton in the murder of Neu along with
"Dizzy" Daniels, another gangster,
who was in prison for the murder
of a St. Louis policeman.
Renard testified that the night before the robbery he went to the home of Max Simonson, ex-convict and "house" in Penton. He was ordered by Dinty Colbeck,
head of the Egan gang, to take Joseph and Daniels from the gang's hangout at the Maxwellton Club
"where they wanted to go—they will show you." Pursuant to their directions, Renard said, he took them to Simonson's, where there was talk about "the bonds" and disposing of the mail sacks and where finally Tipton and Daniels said: "See that way out the door with the car (meaning the robbery car). We want to ditch it."
Waiting for Pair at Time.
The gangster testified that he left ahead of Tipton and Daniels at liberty on bond when the mail truck was robbed and was now serving time at Leavenworth penitentiary for another crime, confessed to postoffice inspectors that the Egan
gang had committed the mail robbery and gave full and detailed information of the crime.

statement that on April 2, 1923,

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH
FRIDAY, AUGUST 21, 1931
ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH
PAGE 3A

Background of Neu Murder Case
Which County Is to Reopen
April 2, 1923. — A United States mail truck was held up on Locust street by five men in a Cadillac car who intimidated the driver and guard with pistols and made off with mail sacks containing more than $200,000 worth of negotiable securities, chiefly bonds; considerable cash, and unsigned Government bonds of a face value of $1,000,000.
April 3, 1923. — At 9:30 p. m. Deputy Constable Edward P. Neu patrolling the Gravois road on a motor cycle was murdered by five or six men riding in two automobiles. The slayers abandoned one car, a Cadillac, and made good their escape in the other.
April 4, 1923. — The Cadillac car abandoned by the murderers was found to have been the machine stolen from its owner, a driver, and the postoffice inspectors. It bore no license plates when abandoned. But the plates it bore during the robbery, and which were carefully noted by the mail truck driver, were numbered 192-354. These plates had been stolen from a Ford automobile.
April 19, 1923. — Postoffice inspectors and St. Louis police raided the home of "Whitey" Doering, a member of the notorious Egan gang, in Richmond Heights, St. Louis County, and recovered nearly all the loot stolen from the mail truck. Convinced by this that their early conjecture that the Egan gang held up the mail truck was correct, the inspectors arrested members of that criminal band as fast as they could be found. But there was no evidence against anyone except Doering and one other who was found with him in possession of the loot.
May, 1923. — One of the license plates carried by the mail robbers' car was found by a father in the Meramec River in Penton, near the bridge which carries the Gravois road across that stream. The plate was given to a Deputy Sheriff by the father and the sheriff turned it in to the Sheriff's office at Clayton with the information (obtained from the St. Louis police) that it was one of the plates used in the mail robbery car, and with the suggestion that it be turned over to the Postoffice inspectors in St. Louis who were employing all the resources at their command to identify and convict the mail robbers.
Oct. 24, 1923. — Doering and the man taken with him, one Dave Weisman, were convicted.
August, 1924. — Ray Renard, Egan gangster, who had been at liberty on bond when the mail truck was robbed and was now serving time at Leavenworth penitentiary for another crime, confessed to postoffice inspectors that the Egan gang had committed the mail robbery and gave full and detailed information of the crime. Included in his story was a statement that on April 2, 1923, early in the evening, he drove

GOVERNMENT MOVES TO PADLOCK GARAGE USED BY DRY AGENTS
Complaints That It Was "Bad Place" Made to U. S. Attorney.
By the Associated Press.
CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 21.—The Federal Government had unwittingly moved to padlock as a "nuisance" a base of operations for prohibition enforcement officers. Among 46 applications filed in Federal court here yesterday for padlocks on places allegedly evading the prohibition laws, was one naming a garage that has been rented for several months by Federal agents.
Enforcement officers admitted they rented the garage and had used it as a base of operations for prohibition enforcement officers. DIPLOMAT QUESTIONS PATERNITY OF CHILD
Capt. C. C. Gross Asks Chicago Court to Decide Point in $1,000,000 Fight.
By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Judge Joseph B. David yesterday signed a decree divorcing Capt. Christian Channing Gross and Mrs. Virginia Harrison Gross, but had to vacate the decree a few minutes later. He ordered attorneys in the case to meet with him today.
The Grosses have fought for years in the courts of Illinois, New York and France over a $1,000,000 trust fund once turned over by Mrs. Gross to her husband. The divorce is one phase of the contest.
When the divorce was granted, Robert Cantwell Jr., attorney for Gross, who is now in the United States diplomatic service at Ottawa, moved to vacate the decree, saying vacation of the decree was necessary to determine the paternity of a 3-year-old daughter of Mrs. Gross and France over a $1,000,000 trust fund. Cantwell said Gross did not deny paternity of the child, but wanted a ruling on the point. Cantwell said that Gross has asked for a leave of absence to come to Chicago to tell his story, inasmuch as further action depends on the paternity point. Gross also asked that Mrs. Gross, together with the child, Anna, be brought from France to the Chicago courts.
The Grosses acknowledge the parentage of two children, of whom Gross has obtained custody. If the court rules the third also is the daughter of Gross, then he will also attempt to gain custody of her. Cantwell said Gross was unaware of Anna's existence until she was almost 3 years old.
Mrs. Gross is the daughter of Francis Burton Harrison, former Governor-General of the Philippines and heirless of a large San Francisco estate. They were married in 1922 and separated in 1925, at which time they made an agreement concerning the disposition of the trust fund, turned over by Mrs. Gross to her husband. Last August Gross won a default divorce decree here, but it was appealed by Mrs. Gross. The decree was upheld except for certain details, principally concerning the trust fund.
This divorce followed an estrangement when Gross was United States Charge d'Affaires in Haiti. Two children, Barbara and Peter, were left temporarily with their mother. Last year Gross invoked the aid of a French court at Grenoble to find his son. Mrs. Gross and Marius de Zaya, her Mexican adjuvant, were sued in a kidnapping charge. It developed that Mrs. Gross had a third child, Anna.
Gross then denied he was the child's father, declaring he had been in Haiti while Mrs. Gross was in Europe four months prior to the birth of the child. The Grenoble court did not rule on the point.

U. S. Envoy's Daughter Who Swam Bosporus
MISS ANITA GREW.
TWENTY-TWO-YEAR-OLD daughter of United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, who swam the Bosporus from the Black Sea to the Sea of Marmara, about 19 miles. She entered the water at 4:40 a. m. and reached Seraglio Point at 5:50 a. m. Ambassador Grew and a shipbuilder from Stenka accompanied the swimmer in a boat, feeding her hot chocolate and playing a phonograph from time to time to encourage her. Besides being a swimmer, Miss Grew also is interested in flying.
Gross then denied he was the child's father, declaring he had been in Haiti while Mrs. Gross was in Europe four months prior to the birth of the child. The Grenoble court did not rule on the point.

SHRINKAGE OF ESTATE LEFT BY A. C. F. MEYER
Banker's Equity in Stock Worth $393,000 Sold for $376 by Executor.
An executor's sale yesterday of equities remaining in bank stock worth $393,000 at par on which Alfred C. F. Meyer, president of the Lafayette South Side Bank and Trust Co., had borrowed money, brought only $376. Meyer killed himself May 2.
A report of the sale, filed today in Probate Court at Clayton, showed Meyer had borrowed $474,237 on the stock, most of which is worth more than par value, and the total of which is somewhat more than the $393,000 given as its par value in an inventory of the estate filed several weeks ago.
Meyer also was president of the South Side National Bank and chairman of the board of directors of the Twelfth Street National Bank.
The inventory placed the value of his estate at $545,300, with stocks valued at $484,495, par value, as the bulk of it. After the stocks offered yesterday were disposed of, only stocks of $90,840 par value remained in the estate.
The other items in the inventory are notes valued at $54,173; bonds and coupons, $23,351; cash, $24,665, and goods and chattels, $1720, besides small equities in real estate.
Hugh B. Ross, trust officer of the Lafayette South Side Bank & Trust Co., who handled the sale yesterday, said that representatives of the holders of the collateral, principally finance companies and banks, had bought the equities in the stock sold yesterday.
The principal items were 804 shares of Lafayette Bank stock out of 927 which Meyer held; 660 of his 668 shares of the Jefferson-Gravois Bank, and 408 of his 409 shares in the Twelfth Street National Bank. Thirteen other stocks were in the list disposed of yesterday.
ST. LOUIS WOMEN HURT WHEN AUTO GOES OVER BANK
Mrs. Minnie Lieber, 4501 Maryland avenue, president of a millinery company, suffered a broken shoulder yesterday when an automobile in which she was riding skidded near West Alexander, Pa., and ran down a 20-foot embankment. Mrs. Lieber, who is 67 years old, was taken to a hospital at Wheeling, W. Va.
She left New York Tuesday to return to St. Louis with her daughter, Miss Edna Lieber. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fricke. The others of her party escaped injury.

FOREST FIRES DESTROY TWO TOWNS IN IDAHO

Third Mining Village Also in Danger as Flames Continue to Spread.

By the Associated Press.
BOISE, Idaho, Aug. 21.—Quartzburg and Granite Creek, ghost towns with histories dating back to the earliest mining era of Idaho, were in ashes today and a third town, Placerville, was in danger as the result of widespread forest fires.

Near Placerville 200 refugees, driven from their homes in the path of an advancing fire, were huddled on a sand flat fringed by the blaze. A fourth town, Centerville, was for a time encircled by fire, but was thought to have been saved last night.

There was a letup in the intensity of the fire when darkness brought cool air to the burning district but fire fighters held out little hope of quenching the flames before another hot sun came today to speed them along.

The loss at Quartzburg was estimated by authorities at $500,000. The equipment of a gold mine which had employed most of the town's 200 residents was destroyed.

Postmaster and Wife Stay.
Under a driving wind the Quartzburg fire broke out of control yesterday and swept down the canyon on three sides of the town.

Sensing the danger, all but two of the inhabitants had fled. The remaining pair, Fred Daly, Postmaster, and Mrs. Daly, remained in their stone house while flames reduced the rest of the village to ashes. They were unhurt. The Daly home and three other buildings were the only ones to remain. Little was left of Granite Creek, the fire taking a small Catholic church, a dwelling and a large barn. No casualties were reported.

Quartzburg reported all residents accounted for. They recalled it was the second serious fire there in two years, the previous one burning down 14 buildings at the mine.

Lightning Starts Fires.
A. H. Burroughs, operator of the mine, expressed doubt Quartzburg ever would be rebuilt.

At Placerville, Mrs. Loris Robinson, telephone operator and storekeeper, and her two daughters, Lorena and Henrietta, insisted on remaining there as long as their services could be of help.

North of the burned towns a fight was being waged against flames in the Idaho forest. Lightning started 11 fires there yesterday and fighters were rushed to the scene by horse, motor truck and pack horses.

ENGINEERS BEGIN VALUATION OF MEXICO, MO., GAS PLANT

Action Follows Petition That Company Be Required to Give Service Without Franchise.

MEXICO, Mo., Aug. 21.—Retained by the City Council to make an independent valuation appraisal of the Missouri Power & Light Co. gas plant here. Engineers of Burns & McDonnell, a Kansas City firm, began work here today.

The Mexico Council seeks to require the power company to furnish natural gas here without a franchise grant and has requested the Missouri Public Service Commission to order the change from artificial gas made. The power company filed a motion with the commission to dismiss the petition, alleging lack of jurisdiction.

The power company is asking for a natural gas franchise, and has filed natural gas rate schedules which are lower than artificial gas rates. The Council asserts they are still too high, and Mayor J. F. Jolley employed the engineers to make an independent valuation. The Public Service Commission recently completed a detailed inventory of company properties here for rate making purposes.

CLOSED CHICAGO BANKS HOLD FUNDS OF COOK COUNTY

Judge Holds They Have Priority, but Process of Recovery Is Slow.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21. — Cook County was a heavy depositor in the 12 closed neighborhood banks of John Bain, Edward McCabe, Assistant County Treasurer, said that about $300,000 of collected taxes had been deposited in the banks. Judge Daniel P. Trude last week ruled that such deposits had priority claims, but county officials declared it would take considerable time to collect all the funds, and that, meanwhile, interest on tax anticipation warrants issued against them would continue to mount.

However, McCabe said, a check for $100,000 had been received from one of the banks and a check for $50,000 was expected soon from another in payment of county deposits.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday against John Bain, Inc., in United States District Court on behalf of three creditors with alleged claims totaling $700, who charged that other creditors had received preference. John Bain, Inc., is a real estate concern.

Addresses County Bankers.

Charles B. Mudd of St. Charles, president of the Missouri Bankers' Association, spoke at the bi-monthly meeting of the St. Louis County Bankers' Association at Grupp's Grove, Des Peres, Mo., last night. He outlined the purposes of the association and stressed the value of co-operative organizations. About 50 members of the county organization attended the meeting.

ZOO OBTAINS SLOTH AND TREE PORCUPINE

Japanese Salamanders and Several Rare Monkeys Also in Collection.

A tree porcupine from Brazil, with a very long, very bare tail; two undulating black Japanese salamanders; several rare monkeys and a two-toed sloth were placed on exhibit at the Zoo yesterday.

The sloth lives upside down and looks as if he had just come out of a shower bath. His long, grayish-black hair is matted and he has a damp appearance although he is very dry. Yesterday, when he was prodded into position and photographed, was one of the most exciting days of his career, for life flows uneventfully among the sloths.

In the native state they live in cecropia trees, moving carefully from limb to limb, stripping off the leaves for food. When all the leaves are gone, the sloth remains in the tree, dieting until he is almost dead of starvation. Then, and not until then, he descends, walks painfully to the nearest cecropia tree, climbs and starts the leaf-stripping process all over again.

The long tail of the porcupine of the trees of Brazil—to quote a letter Zoo Director George Vierheller received about the animal—helps him climb, inasmuch as it is prehensile, or able to grasp, and gives him his second name. Scientifically he is Syntheres prehensilis. His quills, while very sharp, are not so long as those of other porcupines, and he cannot shoot them at an enemy. Neither can any other porcupine, for that matter.

With the sloth and porcupine in the small mammal wing of the reptile house are a marten from the humid interior of British Columbia, and two new weasel-headed armadillos from Brazil. The Japanese salamanders occupy a tank in the reptile house. In their native streams, 700 to 5000 feet above sea level, they attain a length of five feet. The zoo's specimens, however, are about two feet long. Large inquisitive ears and a golden brown coat are the outstanding characteristics of the marten. The armadillos, brick red and tan, appear almost immobile, but can move with remarkable rapidity in a series of running jumps.

While the salamanders' name may be considered ostentatious even for the largest of the batrachians, one of the new monkeys has a far more adequate label.

About 20 inches high, he has a prognathous jaw, beetting brows, thin lips and heavy shoulders which he holds forward in the position boxers frequently assume. He might have posed for any one of a number of pictures of Neanderthal man squatting before his cave to keep off the saber-toothed tigers. One feels that at any minute he might spring to his feet, land a stinging left hook and then floor some adversary with a right to the chin.

And the sign above his cage proclaims this sinister fellow is Humboldt's woolly monkey, from South America.

In New York last week Vierheller bought two pet monkeys from Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, explorers and authors recently returned from Africa. One of them is Eleanor, a Colobus monkey with long hair and a long white tail. The Colobus, Vierheller says, is almost as rare in captivity as the gorilla.

Kemo, a spot-nosed guenon, also from the Johnson expedition, is in Monkey House, in the large center cage with Eleanor and Petie, a gibbon from Sumatra. Kemo, about a third the size of Petie, harries him almost to distraction and bounds easily out of the gibbon's reach. His large quarters have made him shy, but if you'd sit quietly in his cage for 15 minutes he would come up and sit in your lap and steal things out of your pockets.

BRUNK SUSPECTS 'GHOST' CLERKS ON HOUSE ROLLS

"It Looks Like" Total of 600 Employed Was Excessive by About 400, He Asserts.
"MOST OF THEM WERE NOT HERE," HE SAYS

Treasurer Declares Their Warrants in Some Cases Were Cashed by Legislators Appointing Them.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 21.—Details of his investigation into the payroll of the House of Representatives for the last session were made public yesterday by State Treasurer Larry Brunk. The Treasurer told the correspondent that it appeared from the inquiry to date that many clerks carried on the rolls and receiving pay were not at the capital during the session and did no work.

"It looks like the House roll of 600 clerks was excessive by about 400," he said. "I have no idea how much the State lost through this situation, but I am compiling figures on the clerical payroll and I hope to arrive at a representative figure."
Brunk said that some of the warrants issued for clerks regularly were cashed by the legislators by whom they had been appointed, but he had not determined yet whether the money finally found its way to the clerks. He said his office still was receiving clerical warrants at intervals, to be cashed, although the House stopped active legislative work last May 4, except for a three-day session the first week in June. The clerks are paid $3.50 a day. He said about $3000 in clerical warrants still were outstanding.

Clerks Retained During Recess.
The treasurer said his inquiry indicated the House had a clerical force of about 200 during the recess from May 4 to June 2, and until the Senate completed his impeachment trial on June 12, although the House was only technically in session during that period, except for three days. Brunk was acquitted at the close of the trial.

"Most of those clerks were not here and were not doing any work," Brunk said. "They probably were at home. I don't know who got the money, but it appears that the warrants were sent to the House managers."
Records of clerical employees kept by House committees are limited. The lists sent to the State Auditor, as well as the warrants, show only the name in which the warrant is issued. No lists of addresses are kept and no records have been available during legislative sessions to show what legislators obtained the appointment of clerks carried on the list. "Anti-Ghost" Measures Beaten.
Attempts have been made at various sessions to obtain the passage of bills, or resolutions, requiring the records to show the home address and Jefferson City address of legislative clerks, so that a check could be made to determine whether they were actually here and working. These "anti-ghost" measures invariably have failed or have been killed in committee.

State Representative Clifford C. Rens of the Second St. Louis District, is awaiting trial in Cole County Circuit Court on charges of forging a signature to House warrants issued for a clerk he placed on the payroll.
State Representative Edward L. Britain, of Greene County, also is waiting trial in Cole County Circuit Court on bribery charges, preferred by Brunk. Britain was a member of a House committee which investigated charges against Brunk. The latter charged Britain solicited payment and accepted $400 as a first installment to influence the committee to return a report favorable to Brunk. The Treasurer said he entered into the arrangement to expose the alleged solicitation of a bribe.

No Necessity for Inquiry Haymes Asserts.
By the Associated Press.
SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Aug. 21.—State Senator Lon S. Haymes of Springfield, president pro tem of the Senate in the 1931 Legislature, commenting yesterday on investigation by State Treasurer Larry Brunk into the clerical payroll of the House of Assembly, said he saw no necessity for such an investigation of the Senate clerical forces. The Democratic Senate leader said, however, that "if there was any crookedness, most everyone would be delighted to have it unearthed."
Haymes said his position regarding the employment of excessive legislative clerks was so well known, there was no need for additional comment.

The Senator said the Brunk inquiry "ought not hurt anything," and that "it looks like Brunk has the right dope," regarding acceptance by Representative George Heese of St. Louis County of a $331 fee from a $2000 relief appropriation from the Legislature to a St. Louis County widow, which the Treasurer is investigating. Brunk and Heese are Republicans.

BRUNK TO ASK SHARTEL TO TAKE UP HEEGE CASE

Wants Him to Call Conference of Cole and St. Louis County Prosecutors.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 21.—State Treasurer Brunk, whose investigation led to disclosure that State Representative George F. Heege of St. Louis County accepted a fee for sponsoring a relief bill in the last Legislature, will ask Attorney-General Sharitel to call Prosecuting Attorneys of St. Louis and Cole counties into conference next week to determine what action if any, shall be taken against the Representative.

Nike Sevier, Cole County prosecutor, announced yesterday he would file no charges in case, holding he had no jurisdiction.

Heege had admitted he received $333 from Robert F. Stanton, St. Louis County Counselor and practicing attorney, for his services in introducing and obtaining passage of the measure. Two-thirds of the money went to Mrs. Anna Meyer of St. Louis County as indemnity for the death of her husband, killed by an automobile while in the employ of the State Highway Department. Mrs. Meyer had agreed to give Stanton one-third for his services and Stanton split his fee with Heege.

Judge Hamilton Takes Under Advisement Suits of Vending Company to Restrict Police.

The application of Charles H. Mueller, president of the Calumet Mint Vending Co., for an injunction to restrain police from interfering with operation of mint vending slot machines, was taken under advisement by Circuit Judge Hamilton yesterday after testimony had been heard.

Police have ordered storekeepers to remove the machines, contending they are gambling devices. Mueller told the court they were not used for gambling.

Mueller testified he purchased 100 machines in September, 1929, paying $10,500 cash for them and at the same time obtained $3000 worth of mints but the whole outfit has been stored most of the time at 2753 Junata street because of police objection to the machines being set up. He told the court that metal tokens which may be won when a customer deposits a five-cent piece for a roll of mints are not redeemable in either money or merchandise, but are only good to be played back in the machine for the amusement of the customer who may thereby read "wise-cracks" displayed on a revolving disc.

Restaurant Owners Heed.

The machines are usually installed in restaurants, drug and candy stores and similar places of business. Mueller said dealers are warned that the device must not be used for gambling purposes and they accept a printed agreement to follow the rules of the company. He said his machines were so constructed they would not discharge money instead of tokens. If the player should be lucky. From two to 20 tokens may be won on one deposit, he said. Mueller added he has been engaged in the vending business three years but he denied he had any connection with similar concerns which have been prevented from operating here.

Several restaurant proprietors testified they had installed Mueller's machines in places of business but were halted by the police before they could get going. Among the witnesses was Mrs. Alice Holman, restaurant owner at 2330 South Jefferson avenue, who said that when she refused to permit a regular customer to trade out in meals 16 tokens he had won he got mad and quit patronizing her. So she ordered the machine taken out.

Thomas N. Lewis, research officer in the bureau of forensic ballistics in the Police Department, testified it was possible to adjust the vending machines in question so that money instead of tokens could be won by the operator. However, he admitted there was a slight difference in construction between the kind of machines the police had objected to and those owned by plaintiff, one of which was exhibited at the trial and operated for the benefit of the court.

The Police Department in its answer denied interference has been directed against Mueller. The answer sets up that the application for injunction is premature and is designed to anticipate and prevent in advance any police interference with the operation of a large number of slot machines intended to be installed throughout the city under the protection of a temporary injunction. It is further alleged that the slot machines as described in the petition are of the same general type as those involved in many similar injunction suits against the police and which have been held to be gambling devices. The answer asks that an injunction be denied.

Detective Sergt. Charles M. Shelton, in charge of the gambling squad, testified as to the method pursued in making cases against slot machine proprietors. "We first find out," he said, "whether the proprietor will redeem either in money or merchandise before we send one of our men in to play the machine. We are under strict orders not to make any promiscuous raids."

Charles P. Williams and Carroll W. Harlan appeared for the Police Department, while former Circuit Attorney Siders and Bounds E. Hamilton represented Mueller.

STATE WILL LET TOLEDO'S CLOSED BANK REORGANIZE
 Will Not Liquidate Them Unless They Fall to Work Out Solution.
 By the Associated Press.
 TOLEDO, O., Aug. 21. — Word that Toledo's closed banks will have an opportunity to reorganize was given today to depositors who have more than $50,000 tied up in four depositories.
 The announcement was made by Theodore H. Tangeman, State Director of Commerce, who is here as Gov. George White's representative. Tangeman said the State would not liquidate the affairs of the banks, which failed to open for business Monday, unless they could be reorganized.
 While the Department of Commerce began a survey of the situation, County Prosecutor Carl J. Christensen refused the demand of Municipal Judge Ira Cole for an immediate grand jury investigation. The prosecutor said "an early and possibly unwarrented investigation by the grand jury of any of the banks would materially affect public confidence. I am justified in believing that nothing of public interest will be suppressed by the State Banking Department, the Attorney-General and his assistant, the members of the Depositors' Committee and the private auditing firms."

ESTATE, INVENTORY SHOWS Late Debt of Holding Company for Gambling House Under
"Accounts."

The estate of Harry Levin, politician and professional gambler who died April 17, is valued at $101,893 in an inventory filed in Probate Court yesterday by his attorney, Louis D. Scher.
The principal item in the list of holdings is $56,874 in bonds, most of them of Government issue. Other major items are cash, $4884, accounts, $23,500; notes, most of them secured by deeds of trust, $16,876. The $23,500 item carried under the heading "accounts" represents, according to Scher's detail, Levin by the Fenton Real Estate and Investment Co., holding company for the Blumens Club, Jefferson County gambling house

in which Levin was interested financially.
Levin's residence at 6223 Alamo
avenue, held jointly in the names of himself and his wife is not included in the inventory since she became sole owner in entirety with his death.

Levin was one of 14 defendants convicted of conspiracy in the milking of the Jack Daniel whisky warehouse and was sentenced to serve two years in the penitentiary and pay a $5000 fine. For a time he was a Deputy Constable in the court of the late Justice of the Peace Jimmy Miles.
In his will Levin left $1000 each to a son and daughter, half of the residue to his widow and, the other half to be divided among four sisters and two brothers.

Grand Jury Favors Removal of

By the Associated Press.
PADUCAH, Ky., Aug. 21. — A grand jury which investigated the disappearance of records from the McCracken County Courthouse yesterday indicted County Judge W. A.
Middleton, County Attorney Holt
and County Clerk J. W. Polk and recommended their re-

Middleton and Bryan were charged with malfeasance in office and Polk with failure to take a tax receipt. Former Sheriff Emmett L. Holt was indicted for embezzlement and Thomas E. Knight, Louisville, an auditor, was charged with making false Sheriff's settle-

Bryan, Polk, Holt and County Tax Commissioner W. M. Ezell previously had been indicted by the same grand jury for conspiracy in connection with the disappearance of records.
The grand jury charged an audit made by Knight in 1929 failed to

OSCAR JOHNSON TESTIFIES
TO GRAND JURY IN KIDNAPING
He Will Prosecute Assaults to Limit; 19 Other Witnesses
Are Heard.

Oscar Johnson, 38 Portland place, testified before the St. Louis County grand jury yesterday as it opened an inquiry in the attempt of two men to kidnap him Aug. 3, last, on Melrose road near his mother's 7000-acre Franklin County estate
at St. Albans, 40 miles west of St.
Louis.
Johnson, who has announced he will prosecute his assailants to the limit, was accompanied by three St.
Louis detectives. The jury heard testimony from 19 other witnesses,
including employees of the estate,
Deputy Sheriffs, farmers living near Melrose, and physicians and nurses who treated Johnson at Barnes Hospital for injuries he suffered when he fought with the men.
The jury adjourned until Wednesday.
Two suspects, Bart Davis and of the major leagues they are loyal

But in the larger cities the uniform doesn't always mean everything and the Cardinals are finding that out.
Here in Philadelphia, where Con-
Black has given the people
many pennants and two successive world championships and is seeking his third, there is a strange sentiment in favor of the Cardinals.
It may be the natural leaning toward the under dog—and the National League champions of recent years have taken it on the chin so regularly that they certainly can be called "under" or it may be just something about the Athletics.
Or perhaps Old Gabby Street, the placid Sargeant, has caught the popular fancy. At any rate and for whatever reason, there are many persons in Philadelphia who have expressed loudly and emphatically the wish that the Cardinals, will give the Athletics a sound thrashing in the world series, in which St. Louis will participate, barring a train wreck or heart-breaking slump.
Another Side to Lefty Grove.
"I believe Lefty Grove has a lot to do with the way I feel," one baseball writer explained. "He's a great pitcher, make no mistake about that. Anybody who can win is straight in any league and 20
out of 27 thus far needs no further words of praise for his ability on the hill.
"But, say, I'd love to see the

Even Philadelphia Fans Want Cards To Win World Series

By J. Roy Stockton.
PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21.—Baseball fans are strange animals, especially when you find them in the wide open cosmopolitan spaces of the larger cities. In the small towns and even in the smaller cities of the major leagues they are loyal to the home team through thick and thin, and you will find many ballplayers so thick that it's hard to be loyal to them.

of 21 fights in which he engaged in the East.

But Joe, being only 30 years of age, became homesick in Wilson's camp. He wanted to come home to see his father and mother, who live at 2123 Allen avenue. So Gus sent Joe home, then decided it might be well to combine business with pleasure, and he signed Joe for a bout with Abad.

Gus, in addition to defraying the expenses of Joe's vacation, wanted to give the home fans a look at his pupil.

WILSON.

GABLEMAN VICTOR IN TYPO'S GOLF TOURNEY

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 21.—
Caddie at $2 on his final round,
Eddie Gableman of Cincinnati, O., yesterday won the International Union Printers' golf championship and the Walter Hagen trophy with a 72-hole total of 350.

Five strokes behind was the defending champion, C. D. Radbough of Detroit. M. Deans of Toronto was third with 353.

Boxed With Champions.
Joe, feeling the need of more intensive training, went to Wilson and learned many of the finer points of the game from him and from the outstanding fighters who have made Wilson's camp their home in working for fights. Among them were Tony Canzoneri, Kid Chocolate and Benny Leonard, who has been preparing at Wilson's camp for several months for his comeback.

"Joe is a good boy," said Wilson.
"He don't smoke or drink and don't run around at night. He had one bad habit for a small fighter
when he came to me. He used to disappear several times a day and I would find him eating ice cream.
That's no good for a light fighter.
I broke him of the habit. He's got lots to learn but he picked up a great deal from the boys around camp and I think he will do well in the fight game."

"I know Abad is a good man
and Joe needs speed to beat him,
but I think he will be able to turn the trick. Of course, there is danger of him trying too hard before his home fans. I found, when I arrived here, that he was under weight. He had been working too hard so I told him to lay off today.
Tomorrow he can work some more in the gymnasium."

"You learn to know all these fighters when you're around them
as much as I am, and I have learned to know Joe. Why that boy won't talk to nobody for two days before a fight. He goes off by himself and when you do see him he complains 'I got a pain here' or 'I got a pain there.' When Joe talks like that I know he's right. I hope he has a lotta pain between now and Monday and none
after Monday evening."

As Wilson quickly saw, Joe has been working hard, boxing with Joey Parks and Cliff Doetzel and doing so. I work but now that his manager is on the scene he will take it easy.
To back up the Ghnoully-Abad bout, Jack Tippett is lining up a good card consisting of three other 10-round bouts and a fourrounder. He has completed arrangements for one of the other 10-rounders, signing Raoul "Gyp" Zarro to meet Johnny Kaiser. He is angling for a contest between Johnny Hoekstra and Chick Rains
and hopes to bring Allen Matthews together with either Francisco Marino or Cyclone Williams. The four-round preliminary will see Johnny Miles, former Mississippi Valley amateur light heavyweight champion, pitted against Bob Elliott, Jacksonville, Ill., who is to take the place of Fred Stolsch.

MASONIC BOWLERS TO MEET TONIGHT

every Friday. There are several

tional mark of 1:07 3-5 established

6.95 PER CAPITA COST TO ENFORCE
LAW IN ST. LOUIS

Wickersham Commission
Finds 17.2 Pct. of Total Expense of Government.

AVERAGES HIGHER THAN ELSEWHERE

Defines Further Inquiry to Show Whether Municipal Authorities Are Getting Money's Worth.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—The cost of criminal law enforcement in St. Louis is made abundantly clear in the latest report of the Wickersham Commission. During 1929 the direct cost of criminal justice to the city was $5,712,111,
an average of $6.95 for each member of the population. This figure represents 17.2 per cent of total operating cost of all city departments, did not include the indirect economic loss resulting from crime, nor did it include the city's share of the cost of administering Federal laws. It simply represented the total cost of police, prosecution, probation and all correctional institutions in St. Louis.

That criminal justice costs more in St. Louis than in most cities of comparable size, is shown by the figures included in the report. In the case of St. Louis, the average cost per capita was $6.95, as compared with the St. Louis figure of $6.95.
St. Louis spends a larger percentage of its total operating cost for criminal justice than any other city of similar rank, although it should be observed that the St.
Louis figure is low compared with that of most cities in its class.

Comparative Costs.
The following table gives the average cost per member of the population of administering criminal justice during 1929 in the cities studied: St. Louis, $6.95; Boston,
$4.90; Cleveland, $4.90; Baltimore,
$4.90; San Francisco, $6.25; Milwaukee, $4.95.

The commission's statistics show
and question that the cost of criminal justice in cities tends to be higher in proportion to their population. Thus the average per capita cost in cities of more than 1,000,
the population is $7.46, as compared with the average of $6.35 for cities between 100,000 and 1,000,000.
Cleveland is the largest among the cities listed above. Its per capita cost of $4.90 is remarkably low and the contrast is highlighted by the fact that Cleveland's
figure includes that of providing public defenders for accused persons unable to retain counsel.

Where City Tax Dollars Go.
The following table shows how much of the city's tax dollar was expended in combating crime. The table gives the total operating costs of general city departments, the second gives the portion expended on criminal justice; the third what percentage of the whole
the latter amounted to.

Samuel M. Vauclain, Former Dry,
Urges Repeal of 18th Amendment

Baldwin Locomotive Works Head Says Law Cannot Be Enforced Without Use of Army and Navy.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Samuel
M. Vauclain, chairman of the Board of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, formerly an avowed prohibitant, now favors repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment according to an interview with him by Henry F. Pringle, printer in the current issue of The Outlook and Independent.

Conceding that prohibition has been a failure and cannot work under the present enforcement system, Vauclain says:
"I was for it because it abolished the saloons and grogshops.
Instead, our cities and even the country districts have speakeasies.
The bootlegger is getting the revenue which should, in part, go to the Government."

Vauclain, who supported Hoover
in 1928, says he favors a plan suggested by Senator Morrow of New Jersey, which would substitute for

the Eighteenth Amendment control of the liquor policy by individual States.

Referring to the futility of present
enforcement measures, he says,
enforcement of the Volstead act
would be impossible "without the aid of the military and to use the Army and Navy for such a purpose
would bring down upon this country hardships worse than those of Russia."

Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment would not result in a disruption of industry, Vauclain says.
"The working man has not changed," Vauclain continues, "I never had very much trouble with
him. If a man drank too much I reduced his pay so he could not afford to. The saloons were bad;
no one denies that. But the speakeasies are worse, and in addition the men make liquor in their

Vauclain, who supported Hoover
in 1928, says he favors a plan suggested by Senator Morrow of New Jersey, which would substitute for

the Eighteenth Amendment control of the liquor policy by individual States.

Referring to the futility of present
enforcement measures, he says,
enforcement of the Volstead act
would be impossible "without the
aid of the military and to use the Army and Navy for such a purpose
would bring down upon this country hardships worse than those of Russia."

Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment would not result in a disruption of industry, Vauclain says.

"The working man has not changed," Vauclain continues, "I
never had very much trouble with
him. If a man drank too much I
reduced his pay so he could not afford to. The saloons were bad;
no one denies that. But the
speakeasies are worse, and in addition the men make liquor in their homes."

WABASH CONFERS WITH CITY ABOUT
GRADE CROSSINGS

Elimination of Tracks at De Baliviere, Waterman and Kingsbury Under Discussion.

City officials have opened a formal discussion with the Wabash Railway concerning the elimination of the road's grade crossings at De Baliviere avenue, Waterman boulevard and Kingsbury avenue. President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service said it was hoped to reach an agreement with the Wabash and with the Rock Island Railroad, which uses the Wabash tracks east of De Baliviere, but which would be rerouted over the Wabash. It is expected construction can be started next spring.
The agreement on the completed
viaducts over the tracks at Delmar
boulevard and at the intersection of Lindell drive and Union boulevard have set precedents for the future work as to pole-line financing and method of elimination. The method will be to depress the tracks between Union and Delmar boulevards.

Under the city's proposal, the following results would be obtained, in addition to the elimination of grade crossings at the three busy traffic arteries mentioned:
The Rock Island's Skinker
boulevard grade crossing would be abolished, and the Rock Island track turn up between De Baliviere avenue and some point in Clayton. The Rock Island would enter the city over a section of Terminal Railroad track from a point near Olivette to the Wabash near Page avenue and thence over the Wabash.

BRITISH CABINET
HURRIEDLY CALLED

After Adjourning Till Tues-

Emergency Meeting on Budget.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Aug. 21.—Cabinet
members were summoned by telephone and telegram tonight to come back to Prime Minister Macdonald's office at 10 Downing street for another emergency meeting on the budget. "Only a few hours before the hurried summons
was broadcast the Cabinet had adjourned until Tuesday."

Macdonald conferred late in the afternoon with the opposition leaders on the $400,000,000 budget deficit and after that summoned
his colleagues to reassemble.

In the face of a noncommittal
but clearly hostile attitude of the Trades Union Congress toward the Government's economy program,
the Prime Minister was placed in the position of facing a special session of Parliament and trying to force his proposals through with the support of the opposition parties against a section of his own party.

Preston and Collignon Presumably Pushing on to Great Whale River
Taking Cramer's Route.

By the Associated Press.
COCHRANE, Ont., Aug. 21.—Edwin H. Preston and Robert H. Collignon of Detroit were out of touch with civilization today, presumably flying northward to extend the sky trail of Parker D. Cramer.

They took off here yesterday for Rupert House, Que., only 200 miles away, but unconnected with the outer world by either wire or rail.
They had radio but their transmitter was weak and no report was received from them.

The Detroit flyers are blazing an airmail trail from Detroit to Copenhagen by way of Greenland, attempting to complete the survey begun by Cramer, who was lost

after leaving Greenland.

Preston and Collignon should have reached Rupert House, on James Bay, well before dusk yesterday, and it was supposed that today they were pushing on to Great Whale River on the east shore of Hudson Bay. It was considered probable that nothing would be heard of them until they reached Greenland, where Cramer arrived before the public even knew that his flight had begun.

MADRID, Aug. 21.—A Govern-

church property in Spain was published today, as was also a pastoral letter of criticism from Cardinal Primate Pedro Segura y
Saez, an exile in France.

The decree provides that mov-ables, immovables, royal concessions and benefits of Catholic church orders, institutes and establishments cannot be sold, transferred or alienated.

Notaries are prohibited from authorizing or registering any legal instrument pertaining to sales of church property; commercial agents are forbidden to carry out such transactions, and Spanish or foreign authorities are prohibited from authorizing the withdrawal of church stock or funds.

The Government today protested to Pope Pius XI against the activities of the Cardinal Primate.
President Alcala Zamora, Foreign Minister Lerroux, Minister of Justice de los Rios, and Papal Nuncio Tedeschini met in a secret conference at noon today.

The protest was made verbally through the Papal Nuncio at Madrid, against the "grave derogatory effects" of the Cardinal Primate.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes who plunder, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy, or predatory poverty.

JOSEPH PULITZER,

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Crusade Against War.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOUR editorial section last Sunday carried two interesting articles in the furtherance of peace. We hear of disarmament, partial or otherwise, but preparation for war continues on water, land and air. We hear of treaties such as the Kellogg treaty denouncing war as an instrument of national policy, but we continue to preach, teach and prepare for such. We hear of the progress of civilization, but this is wiped away in time of war. We hear of an upward trend to evolution, but war brings to bear an extremely retrogressive influence. National understanding and sympathy, taking years to build up, are wrecked by a few distorted and exaggerated news articles. Brotherly love is taught until war starts, then it is scrapped.

Many people still regard war as something uncontrollable—an act of God, if you will. How little they seem to realize that back of war is greed, selfishness and a refusal to consider the interests of others. How narrow and provincial is the average person's outlook. We no longer live in Washington's day of independence; every nation is interdependent.

It is high time that our Government take steps to scrap the war system and to build up public opinion for peace. This can and will be accomplished through educational channels.

D. R. J.

Mark Twain and the Spider.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE burden of the story of a recent advertising convention in New York was to get merchants and manufacturers to do more advertising. None of their sales arguments, however, can be compared with one advanced some time ago by Mark Twain.

It seems that while Mark was editor of a Missouri paper, a spider had been saying he had found a spider in his paper and asked Mark whether this was a sign of good or bad luck. The following was the reply of the well known humorist:

Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is advertising, so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward.

EDWIN M. MCKINNEY.

A Progressive Legion Post.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

RECENTLY an editorial was published in your paper announcing that a Marion, Ind., post of the American Legion had gone on record against mismanagement of the Veterans' Bureau in Washington. May I say that the Marion post merely is falling in line with an action already taken by far more progressive posts of the country?

Last February, articles on published articles in the Post-Dispatch concerning the Veterans' Bureau, Tri-City Post No. 113, the American Legion, in a regular meeting in Granite City, adopted a resolution vigorously protesting practice of granting high pension and disability claims to employees of the Veterans' Bureau, and asking congressional representatives of this district to give their support to measures designed to stop these practices. Tri-City Post represents a membership of 412.

At the same time, Tri-City Post requested consideration of this problem by the Madison County Council of American Legion posts, to the end that an auxiliary protest be made by the county organization. Due to some red tape ruling, the request of the Granite City post has been allowed to lie buried in a committee for months, but it is to be revived at the next regular meeting of the county council. This action was authorized by a unanimous vote at the last meeting of Tri-City Post.

TRI-CITY POST NO. 113, The American Legion, Granite City, Ill.

Mr. Anderson's Paper.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

ALTHOUGH the Wickersham Commission as a whole made it "impossible" comprehensively to discuss causes, one of its members, Henry W. Anderson of Virginia, in his penetrating and courageous analysis, strikes at the root of the problem.

Mr. Anderson declares our economic, social and legal concepts to be wrong because they are founded on fear instead of faith, and that our general attitude is medieval rather than modern in the real sense of the word. Garret Garrett, writing in the Saturday Evening Post on "The Curse of Plenty," bemoans the fact that we are "power-hungry and home-and-burgundy minded." "Our Medieval Minds" touches on the same idea in the August Harper's. Many observers and writers point to our twentieth century machine power run by sixteenth century emotionalism, but seldom, if ever before, has a thinker of this type traced the front page of the country's newspapers. Therefore, I submit: "Three rousing cheers!"

WINIFRED CARR STUMPE.

AN UNFORTUNATE DIVISION.

With no disagreement as to the country's obligation to take care of its unemployed next winter, it is unfortunate that division should arise over the method of procedure.

Mr. Hoover insists upon the principle of local relief and reiterates his determination not to call a special session of Congress. He has appointed Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., to direct relief in co-operation with the states, cities and towns. In short, unemployment and want are not the concern of the Federal Government. Nor is the Federal Government responsible in Mr. Hoover's philosophy for the very grave necessity which confronts the country with the oncoming winter. Having delayed for so long the institution of anything else, the President prefers following the relief plan which he inaugurated last winter. He has rejected utterly all proposals for public works upon a large scale, as he rejects every proposal that the Government either match the relief funds of local communities and states or enter the field with a fund of its own. Since he alone is able to substitute the one plan for the other, the country can only hope that what he proposes is practicable and will serve the purpose.

We are afraid it will not. We have been afraid that merely to resume where the country left off at the end of last winter will not suffice to take care of perhaps 6,000,000 unemployed workers and their families. In assuming that it can be done in this way, Mr. Hoover sets his judgment above that of all those who disagree with him, and the list is impressive. Senator La Follette of Wisconsin made several months ago a point about it which is important. He urged a special session of Congress and bringing the Federal Government into the field of relief for the reason that local communities had already largely exhausted their credit after a single winter of unemployment. If Mr. Hoover's relief plan is practicable, there will have to be a more generous response from persons of means to make up the difference between public appropriations during the last winter and those to be made in the winter to come. With the condition of business as unfavorable as it is, it seems to us to be assuming a very great deal to believe that individual giving is going to be as generous as it will have to be.

The strength of the other plan—the plan of Gov. Pinchot, of Senator La Follette, of almost all the social workers, of many Congressmen and others—is that it would substitute compulsory for merely voluntary giving. Senator Reed of Pennsylvania objects that under the tax plan Pennsylvania would give more relief than she would receive, which is exactly the virtue of the tax plan. There is abundant wealth in the United States, and in such an emergency as the country faces it should be beneficial. It is not the part of good government to shirk the responsibility of taxing wealth to meet a national necessity. Whether this necessity be unemployment or something else, the obligation of the Government is the same. Mr. Hoover says we are a generous people. He has no fear that we will not care for our own. It would in our opinion be much sounder statesmanship to see that we do care for our own whether we want to or not.

We are afraid that Mr. Hoover has looked at this situation through political rather than through social spectacles. He recently asserted that to institute public works would not afford immediate relief, but who knows how long relief is going to be necessary? Who knows but that we have already lost a precious year getting to a task by which our civilization is by no means the first to be faced? It was in a similar emergency that the Emperor Claudius built the port of Ostia at the mouth of the Tiber, drained the Fucine Lake, and built the two great aqueducts which stand in part today to remind us that the problems of all civilizations are at times alike. Upon a single one of his great public works he is said to have employed 30,000 men for eleven years.

It is not necessary to tell Mr. Hoover, an engineer, that to improve the rivers and augment the national road system, together with public works of a similar nature, would be to build for the future as well as to give relief in the present. It would moreover take relief out of the category of the dole and make it constructive. None of us knows how long it will be before unemployment ends. What we can be sure of is that there are grave dangers in a purely voluntary plan, which is what the Hoover policy comes to.

SWAPPING COLLEGE PROFESSORS.

By reading a recent magazine article on university faculties, a person gets the idea that higher education teaching staffs are built up pretty much after the fashion of baseball teams. Like the big league manager who is long on hitters but short on pitching talent and who therefore effects a trade with some other manager in the opposite fix, so does the present day college president function. Some old professor of ancient languages with a fading reputation is sold down the river, while a psychologist who has not kept up with the times is let go by the waiver route. A dean is worth two department heads, and a department head is good for three snappy young assistant professors. And so on. As to the truth of all this we are not prepared to announce an opinion—let the college publicity departments make answer. But it does give ample excuse to recall Heywood Brown's classic observation of some years ago, namely, that what Harvard ought to do was to trade A. Lawrence Lowell and a couple of deans for a good backfield.

ENGLAND HOLDS ON TO HER HISTORIC HOUSES.

Without adding so much as another comma to their statute books, the English have found a way to stop the exportation of historic old houses, a number of which in recent years have come to America. It is a beautiful example of the English regard for law. In 1913 a Monuments Act was passed which prohibited the sale out of the country of historic property, but it was thought not to include private houses. During the last Parliament, another monuments bill was considered, with a special clause regarding the sale for shipment abroad of private dwelling houses. But wait, said the best legal minds in the Government—we shall try to make the old law do. The other day they appeared with their brilliant solution: To ship his house to America the seller would have to move out; the moment he moved out the house ceased to be a dwelling; it became a monument and, therefore, under the 1913 act it would have to remain on English soil until it fell to pieces. Lord Regin waggingly suggested that the owner might sell the house and then live on the ground floor while the second floor was being taken down and crated up. But the British are much too dignified for such a procedure. The Elizabethan manor houses and the Tudor castles that have so far escaped the eyes of foreigners will stay where they belong.

COUNSEL FROM THE WORLD BANKERS.

The power of international bankers over the social and political structures of the modern world is a familiar circumstance. In their spacious offices lies control of war and peace, of the development of the world's resources and the movements of its commerce. Recognizing this, a declaration on a matter of international policy by a committee comprising delegates from the 10 leading banking nations must have tremendous weight. When such a committee declares for revision of the entire structure of war debts and reparations, at the earliest possible moment, to restore world prosperity, as occurred Wednesday at Basel, then a step has been taken of utmost importance to every nation and individual.

The committee, headed by Albert H. Wiggin of New York, carries one step further with recommendations the readjustment set in motion by the year's debt moratorium. If the debt holiday is to be anything more than a year's interlude in the process of squeezing Germany to pay for the war, it must be followed by the action these bankers urge. The world's present economic maladjustment is a consequence of the impossible terms the victorious nations have sought to force upon Germany. It is true their demands have dwindled since 1919. But Germany's approach to bankruptcy, averted only by Mr. Hoover's timely moratorium proposal, and the world's present economic chaos, prove only too clearly that even the Young plan's provisions cannot be carried out. We have always doubted that anything but complete cancellation of all the war debts and reparations can at last alleviate the economic ills of the world. The bankers might have gone further and agreed with Senator Borah that cancellation of the war debts and reparations upon the condition of disarmament is the real way out.

It is an apt figure whereby the experts characterize Germany's prolonged borrowings to meet her payments as "a continuous increase in snowball fashion of the foreign debt." Naturally, such an agglomeration of obligations is deadly to the credit of Germany, and explains the hesitancy over extending her loans. Without the reparations millstone, loans to Germany should be an excellent risk, in financing the recovery of an energetic people. While the burden remains, Germany's financial stability is endangered, and there can be only an adverse effect in the markets and financial centers of the world. Renaissance of the Reich is similarly delayed by the tariff walls which block its goods, an important factor in reparations payments, from entry to foreign markets. The bankers strike at such cut-throat tariff tactics with the statement, "Financial remedies are powerless to restore economic prosperity unless there is a radical change in this policy."

The message from Basel strikes at the heart of the world's unrest, and aligns the bankers with the economists and statesmen who for years have urged revision. Such a step might have seemed impossible of realization a few months ago. Today, with the more general understanding of the world's problems inspired by discussion of the moratorium, and with the backing of the bankers' potent group, it is within the realm of possibility.

IN WHICH WE MAKE A PREDICTION.

Those who had the good fortune to read "Why We Behave Like Human Beings"—and they must include nearly everyone, judging from the way that rollickingly adventurous best seller swept the country—will be glad to know there is soon to be a posthumous book by Dr. Dorsey, entitled, "Man's Own Show: Civilization." Shortly before his death last spring, he wrote the preface. It reads as follows:

I have attempted in this volume to discuss human beings and civilization as objectively as I could. I was neither human nor civilized, but nevertheless had retained my human right to be curious about everything, my acquired interest in anything or anybody, and my constitutional privilege to speak my mind about anything.

With no more information about "Man's Own Show: Civilization" than that, we are willing to chance a bold prediction. Here is a book!

TWO KIPLINGS AT LOOS.

Rudyard Kipling stood the other day near Loos village in France, where the schoolboys of Britain threw themselves against the German lines in grape harvest, 1915. To the south lay Lens and to the north Auchy, and in between Lone Tree, Hill 70, Bois Hugo and Chalk Pit Wood—all names spelled and respelled in blood red during those furious days of that early autumn. The teller of the Puck stories and the plain tales from the hills was there to help dedicate a monument to some 20,000 of the youths from the campus lanes who ran out of the trenches around Loos, never to return—part of the war's unidentified dead. Among those missing in action was Kipling's only son, torn to pieces by artillery fire. The father's remarks counted for little. What Lincoln said of speech making at Gettysburg held at Loos. What matters is that at the very time when those boys should have been going back to their studies for another year they died, choking gas, on a tangle of jagged wire—as an understanding school teacher from across the seas was to phrase it for them later, in a war to end war? If the monument at Loos is such a reminder, it stands in the cause of peace; if not, it only glorifies fruitless slaughter and had better not have been raised.

ONE-MAN CARS.

Yesterday an account was given of the testimony of William Parker, Public Service Co. employee, before the arbitration board, of the additional duties devolving upon the operator of a one-man street car. In addition to driving the car, he must sell commutation tickets, issue transfers, make change, answer passengers' questions, obtain names of witnesses and make reports in cases of accidents, properly account for fares collected, inspect the car for mechanical condition and learn 69 rules in the company's instruction book.

On the same page was printed the report of an accident at Broadway and Osceola, in which eight persons were injured. A one-man street car hit an automobile and knocked it into the path of another automobile. Also on the same page was the story of another accident in which a one-man People's motorbus overturned an automobile at Kingshighway and Clayton, injuring one person.

A simple little study in cause and effect.

CAPPING THE GUSHER.

Our Reserve Bank in Foreign Finance

Collaboration of Federal Reserve with Bank of France in $250,000,000 credit to Bank of England indicates important role this country is playing in world finance; system had aided Britain on a previous occasion, and six other European nations; present guarantee may never be drawn upon, but serves to establish confidence.

From a Bulletin by Dominick & Dominick.

PARTICIPATION of the Federal Reserve Banks with the Bank of France in the recent $250,000,000 credit extended to the Bank of England is a clear indication of the increasingly important part which the American banking system is playing in international financial transactions. Owing to this country's growing prominence as a financial center and its large supply of monetary gold it is, of course, probable that the foreign responsibilities of the Reserve banks and their collaboration with the banks of the other countries will increase, rather than diminish, in the future.

Under the terms of the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, the 12 Reserve banks are given authority to engage in certain definite international transactions, such as the purchase or sale of bankers' acceptances and bills of exchange, dealings in gold coin or bullion or loans on gold, the maintenance of accounts in foreign countries, etc. During the first 10 years of the operation of the system, such transactions were relatively unimportant. No central banking credits, such as the one just made to the Bank of England, were extended. During the past five years, however, the Federal Reserve system has participated with the central banks of other countries, in the extension of a number of credits designed chiefly to aid in stabilizing monetary conditions in those countries.

The first credit of this nature extended by the Federal Reserve was one of $200,000,000 to the Bank of England in 1925, when Great Britain undertook the re-establishment of the gold standard. In the following year, the Federal Reserve participated to the extent of $10,000,000 in a $25,000,000 international credit to the Bank of Belgium. In 1927, it took $15,000,000 of a $75,000,000 international credit to the central bank of Italy, and in the same year advanced $5,000,000 to the Bank of Poland as its portion of a credit arrangement participated in by the central banks of 14 countries. In 1929, the Reserve system provided the Bank of Rumania with $4,500,000 as part of a $25,000,000 international credit. All these credits have now been repaid.

The current year has seen by far the most active for the Reserve system in so far as the extension of international credits is concerned. Arrangements were made in June to advance $25,000,000 to the Reichsbank as part of a $100,000,000 central banking credit supplied jointly with the Bank of France, the Bank of England and the Bank for International Settlements. Smaller advances have been made to the Bank of Austria and the Bank of Hungary. While the credit recently extended to the Bank of England is the largest central banking operation of its kind in history, the portion provided by the Reserve system, $125,000,000, is considerably smaller than the $200,000,000 it advanced to the Bank of England in 1925. The present credit, moreover, differs from the previous one in that it provides for the purchase of sterling commercial bills, whereas the 1925 credit placed gold balances in New York at the disposal of the Bank of England. By guaranteeing to purchase sterling bills up to a value of $250,000,000 upon request, the Reserve system and the Bank of France have, in effect, relieved the Bank of England of the necessity for discounting these bills itself, and have thus made the reserves available for use in other directions, should they be required.

It is significant that the earlier credit was never drawn upon, and it is widely believed that the present credit will not be used by the English bank. Its principal value lies in its psychological effect, for, by assuring liquidity in London during the period in which a large volume of British funds are virtually "frozen" in Germany, it has created confidence in the Bank of England's ability to meet all demands made upon it and has acted to check the withdrawal of funds from England, which was causing weakness in sterling exchange.

Actually, the exchange position of the pound could have been supported and credit could have been indirectly extended to the English banks by the informal purchase of sterling bills by the Federal Reserve banks and the Bank of France. In the past, the Reserve system has frequently purchased sterling bills to prevent undue weakness in the exchange rate, particularly in the fall of the year, when sterling has been under seasonal pressure due to British purchases of American grain and cotton.

Such a course could have been followed in the present instance, but it is doubtful if it would have had as powerful an influence in restoring public confidence as the formal indication by the Federal Reserve banks and the Bank of France of their absolute confidence in the position of the Bank of England and the inherent strength of the British banking structure.

A Gentle Reminder

From the St. Paul Dispatch.

MOST reforms are carried to success on a wave of universal popular indignation. New York landlords must have worked on this principle when they recently introduced a device to make their tenants as tax-conscious as they. Apartment dwellers now find gummed labels attached to their rent bills reading as follows: "You are paying — per cent of your annual rent in real estate taxes to New York City. Economy in government means lower rent." It is designed to be a constant reminder to a class ordinarily very little concerned with real estate levies. Estimates state that taxes take from 10 to 20 per cent of the gross income from property. The landlord, of course, takes it out on the tenant.

The rent payer's realization that the charge is passed on to him should jar him out of his complacency and add new recruits to those seeking economy in government. Tax reforms in particular need the backing of the whole population.

The Equalization Fee Again

From Editorial Research Reports.

(The president of the American Farm Bureau Federation has announced that the Federation has returned to advocacy of the equalization fee proposal.)

THE equalization fee proposal visualizes the creation of Government corporations to purchase surpluses of agricultural products. The price to be paid was the foreign price plus the United States tariff duty. The purchases were to be sufficiently large to enable this price to obtain as the domestic price. The quantities purchased were to be sold abroad at whatever they would bring, presumably, the world price. The loss incurred was to be repaid by the producers, proportionately to their share in the total production, through collections by shippers, transportation or millers. It was claimed that the farmers would gain more by this price-pegging of most of the crop than they would lose by reimbursing for the loss on that sold abroad. For instance, if the wheat crop were $50,000,000, the price to be sold at $1.02, or $51,000,000, would be a surplus, and if the foreign price were 60 cents, the purchasing price of the surplus would be 60 cents plus 42 cents, the amount of the tariff. The whole crop would be sold at $1.02, or $51,000,000. The loss to be repaid by the farmers would be 42 cents on 250,000,000 bushels, or $105,000,000. The total amount received by the farmers would hence be $725,000,000.

Without the equalization fee, the domestic price would be the same as the foreign price, 60 cents, and the total received for the wheat crop would be $50,000,000. In other words, the equalization fee, by adding $105,000,000 to the farmers' pocket and taking out $105,000,000, would result in a net gain of $267,000,000.

Advocates of the equalization fee insist that the plan was necessary in order to give the farmers protection similar to that enjoyed by manufacturers. For the farmers' products were on an export market rather than on a domestic market, so that the domestic price was the foreign price, with duties of no effect in keeping the domestic price high.

The McNary-Haugen bill containing the equalization fee proposal was defeated in the House on June 3, 1924, by a vote of 254 to 154. There was little support for it from the South, where the price of cotton was then high. In the spring of 1925, it was defeated in the Senate by a vote of 45 to 39, and in the House by 212 votes to 182. By the end of the year, however, cotton prices had fallen sharply, and the bill, now with special relief provisions for cotton growers, was passed early in 1927 by 477 to 29 in the Senate and 214 to 175 votes in the House. It was vetoed by President Coolidge on Feb. 25, 1927, and no attempt was made to override the veto. In 1928, the McNary-Haugen bill was again passed—by 53 to 25 in the Senate and 204 to 121 in the House, only to be vetoed again by President Coolidge, on May 23, 1928. The attempt to override the veto in the Senate failed short by four votes.

The 1928 Republican National Convention rejected, by vote of 501 to 277, a plank endorsing the equalization fee. The Democratic convention, and Gov. Smith in his campaign, endorsed the principle of the fee, without specific commitment to the McNary-Haugen machinery.

ANGEL FOOD CAKE
Flavored With Chocolate. This is Delicately.
Beat the whites of nine large eggs until frothy, then gradually add one-half cup fine granulated sugar, beating the mixture constantly until the egg whites are thick. Mix one cup sifted cake flour with one teaspoon cream of tartar, one-half cup sugar and one-fourth cup cocoa. Stir four times and then fold into the egg white mixture.
Put by the spoonful into an ungreased, medium sized angel cake pan and bake for 50 minutes in a slow oven. The oven should be almost cold when the cake is first put in and the heat gradually increased to a temperature of never more than 350 degrees.
When done, remove from the oven and turn the cake upside-down to cool, placing the pan on a wire rack or some support so that air can circulate around the cake while cooling. When cold the cake should drop from the pan—if necessary loosen it around the edges with a knife.

PLANNING THE MENU: RECIPES FOR WEEK

Salmon in Aspic, Vegetable Casserole and Cheese Crisps Among Recipes.

Fresh berries, fruits and vegetables continue to play a large part on the week's menus published in this section. All are to be found in the markets in great profusion and at prices lower than they have been in a great while.

Salmon in aspic for Sunday night supper is a dish not often suggested, but it is suited for warm days. It also has the great advantage of being better for standing a day, so it can be made on Saturday and kept in the refrigerator until just before serving.

The roast lamb shoulder for Sunday dinner gains a new flavor if two or three very small slivers of garlic are pushed in the meat through slits made with a sharp knife before the meat is cooked. In the stuffing for the lamb mix one-quarter cup chopped mint leaves and the grated rind of half a lemon for a delicious novelty.

For the garnish of stuffed beets Monday night, cut out the centers of chilled cooked beets, and stuff with a mixture of finely chopped celery, a little minced onion and mayonnaise enough to hold these together.

Baked rice for the same dinner may be prepared as follows: Mix two cups of cold boiled rice with one cup of white sauce flavored with one-half teaspoon of curry powder and one tablespoon lemon juice. Put in a baking dish, spread buttered crumbs over the top and bake for 25 minutes in a moderate oven.

RECIPES FOR THE WEEK.

Salmon in Aspic.

Chill a pound can of salmon steak, remove from the can and drain. Soak three tablespoons plain gelatin in one-half cup cold water for 10 minutes. Stir into three cups boiling water, add the juice from the salmon, one-quarter cup lemon juice, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one teaspoon sugar, one teaspoon Worcester sauce and a bouillon cube. Stir until the cube dissolves then strain part of the mixture into an oval, medium sized mold that has been rinsed with cold water. There should be a layer about one-fourth inch deep in the mold. Chill, and when firm, decorate with slices of stuffed beets. Place the salmon carefully on the aspic.

dash of cayenne. After spreading mixture, toast again until cheese melts and serve crisp hot.

Colonial Custard.

This is made by covering slices of sponge cake with alternate layers of cold boiled custard and sliced peaches or mashed berries. Garnish the top with whipped cream and fruit.

Cole Slaw, Cream Dressing.

Shred a small crisp head of new cabbage. Beat one egg until light. Mix 3 tablespoons vinegar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon celery salt, 1 teaspoon salad oil, 2 teaspoons sugar, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard in small saucepan and heat to the boiling point over a slow fire. Pour this gradually over the beaten egg, stirring constantly. Return to the saucepan and cook very slowly, stirring for about two minutes, or until as thick as cream. Remove at once from the fire and turn out into a bowl. Cool; when cold, beat in 1-3 cup thick sweet or sour cream and mix with the shredded, crisp cabbage.

Eggless and Sugarless Cake.

Here's a tasty and inexpensive cake. Take one and three-quarters teaspoons soda, one cup sour milk, one cup molasses, two and one-third cups flour, two teaspoons ginger, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon cloves, and one-quarter cup shortening. Mix soda with sour milk, and add to molasses. Add dry ingredients sifted together, then melted shortening. Pour in a buttered shallow pan and bake in a moderate oven for about 25 minutes.

PEACH BAVARIAN CREAM

Still Another Recipe for Fresh Peaches.

Put half a package of lemon flavored gelatin in a bowl and pour ½ cup boiling water over it. Stir until dissolved, then add ¼ cup cold water and ¼ cup peach pulp made from mashed fresh peaches that have been peeled and mashed with a silver fork. If necessary add 2 tablespoons sugar to sweeten.

Cool the mixture until beginning to thicken, then whip in the stiffly beaten white of 1 egg and 1-3 cup cream whipped stiff. Continue whipping the mixture until it is stiff enough to mold. If the bowl containing the mixture is placed in a pan of ice water this will take only a few minutes. Pour into individual molds and chill before serving.

LAMB CHOP GRILL

Pineapples Add Flavor to This Meat Course.

Take Saratoga lamb chops which are cut from a boned and rolled shoulder of lamb. Lay chops in a sizzling hot frying pan and sear quickly on both sides. Then reduce temperature, turning chops frequently, and finish cooking at a low temperature.

Do not add water or cover the pan. If any excess fat gathers, turn it off from time to time so that the chops broil and not fry. In another pan as chops are almost done, pour a little of discarded fat and fry pineapples slices. Alternate chops and pineapples on platter.

FRUIT ROLL

Delicious Pastry for Apples, Peaches or Berries.

Take four medium sized apples or other fruit. If apples are used chop fine before putting in roll. Cook one and one-half cups sugar and two cups water over slow fire, and while this is being done, make a rich biscuit dough.

Roll dough about half an inch thick, spread with fruit, and roll in a long roll. Cut in pieces and slide down in hot syrup, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon, and a small piece of butter on each. Bake in hot oven until crisp brown and fruit has had time to soften. Serve with plain or whipped cream.

BOILED HAM

Browning in the Oven Adds to the Flavor.

Wash and scrape the ham thoroughly and place it, rind side up, on a rack in a ham boiler or a large kettle, and add water to cover. Partly cover the kettle with a lid. Cook the ham at simmering temperature, just below boiling, and keep it well covered with water. If desired, add two or three bay leaves, several stalks of celery, a carrot, an onion and one-half cup of vinegar.

Cook the ham for 25 to 30 minutes per pound or until the meat is tender. If possible, let the ham cool in the broth. Remove the rind, sprinkle the flat surface with brown sugar, stud with cloves and brown in a hot oven. Or, make a paste of two cups of brown sugar and three cups of fine soft bread crumbs, one teaspoon of prepared mustard and either or vinegar enough to moisten the mixture. Spread the paste over the fat covering of the ham and stick long stemmed cloves into the surface. Bake the coated ham for 10 minutes in a hot oven.

SANDWICH COMBINATIONS

Learn to Use Cheese, Nuts, Relish and Jelly Freely.

A dainty sandwich with a really good combination filler is a joy, and the more combinations one can devise, the better will be the tea tables or picnic basket. Banana butter, mayonnaise and chopped nuts, make a good sandwich, as do the following: Cream cheese and raspberry jelly, peanut butter and currant jelly, minced ham and pepper relish, chopped nuts and peach jam, chopped nuts and orange marmalade.

CHILI EGG NOODLES

Here's a Rather Unusual Dish When the Cool Day Comes.

Cook five ounces of egg noodles until tender, then drain. Fry one small chopped onion, a chopped green pepper, and a pound of round steak cut in small pieces in a pan until brown. Add one-half cup of tomato pulp, one cup of cooked kidney beans, one-half teaspoon of paprika, one-half teaspoon salt, one cup of water, and the noodles, cooking until thoroughly heated.

Potato Salad.

Cut one quart of cold boiled potatoes in cubes, add one onion very finely sliced, a little chopped parsley and a fourth of a cup of French dressing.

GREEN CORN GEMS

Still Another Way to Use Fresh Corn; a Muffin Substitute.

To two cups of fresh corn which has been put through the food chopper, add one-third cup milk, two beaten eggs. Sift together three cups flour, three tablespoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. Add this to the corn mixture, drop in hot greased gem pans, and bake in a hot oven from 20 to 25 minutes.

SPANISH DECREE FORBIDS SALE OF CHURCH PROPERTY

ment is greatly satisfied with the Nuncio's sympathetic and comprehensive conduct and attitude toward the republic," Lerroux said. "I know the Nuncio's leadership is responsible for the unselfish attitude of co-operation evidenced by the majority of Spanish Catholics." Circles close to the Government think that cancellation of the Cardinal appointed as Primate of Spain is one of the principal demands.

Papers alleged to have been taken from Justo Antonio Eche-guren, Vicar General of Victoria, while crossing the frontier at San Sebastian last Friday on his way to visit the exiled Bishop Mugica of Olitoria, were mentioned by the Foreign Minister.

The Cardinal's letter declared it "the duty of all Catholics to unite in defense of the church's legitimate interests."

"Bought by God's Enemies," he wrote, "In these moments," he wrote, "Spanish Catholics are being fought by God's enemies. Our rights are being violated. The rights of the church are divine according to the encyclicals of Pope Pius IX and Pope Leo XIII. During these days of persecution the church still has its right to resist."

"For this reason the Government's disposition violates our rights, both natural rights and those provided for in the concordat between Spain and the Vatican. Army and Navy forces, airplanes and machine guns are not necessary to sustain the rights of the church, which the Government wishes to violate by the establishment of divorce."

The Cardinal declared it to be the duty of all Bishops to maintain unviolated "all the rights of the church, and to instruct the faithful in their maintenance."

Socialists Wanted Break.

It is understood on good authority that several Socialist Cabinet Ministers counseled an immediate rupture with the Vatican, but the decree did not go that far.

The decree was proposed shortly after the burning of convents in May, as part of the Government plan to conserve national art objects and property but failed to materialize until yesterday. Although the decree places an embargo on all church deposits and properties, it allows clerics the privilege of carrying small accounts to conduct daily business.

The Government won an important contest in the National Assembly last night, when President Alcala Zamora obtained a modification of the proposal to convert the Assembly into a special tribunal to try all the former leaders of the monarchial regime on charges of irregularities.

A committee accepted the President's proposal that those charged with irregularities be prosecuted in the ordinary courts and that only former King Alfonso be brought before the Assembly.

It is generally believed here that it will be difficult, if not impossible, to bring the former King or the other leaders to Spain for trial.

ROAD NEWLY PAVED BUT NOT OFFICIALLY OPENED

Terminal Railroad Has Still to Build New Viaduct Over Pennsylvania Avenue.

The State completed a new 40-foot concrete pavement over Pennsylvania avenue, between Page avenue and St. Charles road, about a month ago. Highway No. 61 is to be routed over this. While it is possible to drive over the new road now, it has not been opened officially, because an old viaduct of the Terminal Railroad crosses the thoroughfare on numerous wooden supports.

The Terminal expects to complete a new $60,000 viaduct there in about a month, sharing the cost equally with the State. The abutments have been built. Steel girders will be installed, having a clear span of 35 feet, which will leave room for future widening of the street. The State will pave a short gap in the road with quick-drying cement when the old viaduct is torn out.

GAS EXPLOSION AND FIRE IN MUNICIPAL COURTS BLDG.

Blaze Extinguished in Testing Laboratory in Basement With Small Damage.

A small explosion and fire in the basement of the Municipal Courts Building today was caused by the escape of carbon bisulphide through a broken hose in the Municipal Testing Laboratories. The solution, highly inflammable, came into contact with a small hot oven. Firemen extinguished the blaze before any substantial damage was done. Paul Miller, a chemical engineer, and three other employees who were in the laboratory, were not hurt. Burning of the solution converted it into sulphur dioxide, an acid gas which permeated through the building. A woman on the third floor was overcome by the fumes, but was quickly revived.

RALSTON-PURINA CO. CUTS SALARIES 10 TO 15 PER CENT

Feed Concern Employs About 2000 Persons, Including 600 in St. Louis.

Salary cuts of 10 to 15 per cent were announced yesterday for officers and employees of the Ralston-Purina Co., feed mills at 835 South Eighth street. The new schedules will go into effect Sept. 1.

The company has two principal plants, at St. Louis and Kansas City, and operates distributing plants at about 18 cities throughout the country, with a present force of about 2000 persons, 600 of whom are in St. Louis. An officer of the company said today that nearly half of the entire force was engaged in sales work on a salary and commission basis and would not be affected by the salary cut. It is understood that the maximum cut will be made on salaries of officers and the minimum cut on those of lower paid positions.

ROAD TIMEKEEPER HELD UP, ROBBED OF AUTO AND $23

J. W. Mitchell, Timekeeper at a construction camp on a new road being built south of Valley Park, St. Louis County, was held up at his office there last night, and forced to drive to the Lemay Ferry road and out Highway No. 61 to a point near De Soto, Mo., where the two men who held him up took his car and $23.

They informed him that they wanted to use the car and would later leave it in East St. Louis. Mitchell fought the car, a new sedan, about two weeks ago. It has not been recovered.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

ON Sunday night Claire Maldon called Kim up. Mary Faith heard him answer the telephone when it rang. She heard him say, "Wait a minute, Claire. I'll ask her." And then he came into the sitting room, where she sat reading the woman's section of the Sunday paper.

"Claire wants us to go over there and play some poker," he said. "She says they have a crowd of people for supper. . . . Let's go, Mary Faith. Everybody plays cards on Sunday, and we've done nothing but sit around this flat, dying of dry-rot, for a month or more."

Mary Faith looked at him with troubled eyes. "Kim, you and I never have played cards on Sunday," she answered. "Why should we start to do it now?—Besides, the Maldons play for money, and I wouldn't gamble even on a week-day. I don't want to go, Kim."

He stood staring into space for a few moments, then he shrugged his shoulders.

"Suit yourself," he said. "But I hope you won't mind if I go. I'd like to get out of this place for a couple of hours. After all, Sunday is the only day in the week that I have to myself—and I like to see people once in awhile. You never ask anybody here."

"You won't let me ask Jean Bartlett here," Mary Faith reminded him. "And you know we used to have lots of fun with Jean and the men she used to go around with. Kim, I don't like you to get into the habit of drinking and gambling with those Maldons. You never used to do things like that."

Kim started back to the telephone.

"Well, I'm doing them now," he said as he walked away from her. "I suppose I still have some personal liberty, even if I am a married man."

She heard him tell Claire that he'd be right over. Then she heard him go on down the hall to his bedroom.

She got up presently and followed him. He was standing at his dresser, plaiting his blond hair close to his head with two wet brushes.

"KIM, I don't know what to do about the Maldons," Mary Faith said, her eyes meeting his in the cloudy mirror above the dresser. "They're nice people, but I think they're too swift for us. At the same time I think that a wife ought to be a good sport. I'd always made up my mind to like your friends and to go wherever you went."

"Well, why don't you go, then, instead of talking about it so much?" Kim cut her short. "Playing cards on Sunday isn't one of the seven deadly sins, whether you know it or not."

"Oh, I wasn't going to play cards even if I went!" Mary Faith interrupted him this time. "I thought I'd go and read while the rest of you played. I'd have just as good a time as the rest of you, and I wouldn't bother anyone."

Kim thought that over for a moment.

"No, that wouldn't do," he decided. "You'd be just a wet blanket, sitting there by yourself, refusing to take a drink or enter into the spirit of things. . . . If you're not going to go and behave yourself like a human being you'd better stay here."

He took out his bill-fold and took a $10 note from it. Then, with a grin, he handed her the bill-fold.

"That's all I'm going to take with me," he said, pocketing the $10. "I've lost that I'll leave. . . . Ten dollars are all those sharks are going to get from me this night, my girl."

It was long after midnight when he came home. Mary Faith was in bed and he did not turn on the light in the room when he came in. She heard him stumble against a chair. Then he sat down heavily on the side of the bed.

"You can turn on the light, Kim. I'm awake," she said.

He turned it on and stood, blinking at her in the sudden white radiance. His hat was on the back of his head and his overcoat was thrown wide open. He took it off and Mary Faith saw that he had only a vest under it.

"Where's your coat?" she asked him sharply, and he looked down at himself and began to smile sheepishly.

"I took it off while we were playing poker," he explained, "and I must have left it at the Maldons'. Don't worry about it, Mary Faith. Jack'll bring it down to the office in the morning."

He was shaking all over. "Cold, isn't it?" he asked. "Cold as Greenland."

Mary Faith got out of bed and put on her kimono and slippers.

"You're cold," she said. "You hop into bed and I'll get you something hot to drink."

IN THE kitchen she heated some milk and filled a hot-water bottle. When she came back into the bedroom he was sound asleep, and his mother was tucking an extra blanket around his shoulders. She looked at Mary Faith, and spoke to her in a whisper.

"He's been drinking," she said. "He's just like his father before him—too fond of a good time. How many times his father came home to me just like this! I got tired of it after a while and so I left him."

She started out of the room. "You'll get tired of it, too." She threw the words over her shoulder as she went.

Kim slept until 11 o'clock the next morning, although Mary Faith went into his room three times and did her best to wake him up. When he finally did get up he showed no ill effects of the night before. His

THE EMPRESS Whose Hats Upset MODERN MODES

Sedate and "Old-Fashioned" the New Style May Be Called, but the Charming Eugenie Was a Gay, Unconventional Leader in Parisian Fashion and Foibles.

ALL of the moralists are streaming the fact that the new fashions are heralding the return of the old-fashioned woman. Now it's the style to wear the kind of a hat that Empress Eugenie did—a perky little bonnet with a small brim, shallow crown, audacious eye-dip, and an ostrich feather, known in fashion circles as the "Empress Eugenie" hat.

The hat may bring back a sweet and virtuous charm, the moralists believe, but Eugenie and the Parisian ladies certainly didn't find that it worked that way. If their influence is getting to work in the new fashions there is a very interesting winter ahead.

Dressing the way the last French Empress dressed is one thing—but setting the way she asked is something else again. And if American women are going to copy anything out of Eugenie's book besides her hats the reformers will have to give themselves for action in a big way.

The mother of Empress Eugenie, who was the nineteenth century fashion queen as well as the wife of Napoleon III, was a Spanish girl, who had married the Count de Montijo. Eugenie was off to a gay start long before the young Emperor spied her. Her mother helped her along.

The Countess of Montijo was very frivolous and very merry. She to the bull fights, flirted with the toreadors, and presented them with red caps embroidered in gold. She carried a sharp-pointed dagger in her belt, which is a little more advanced than anything the present offers. All in all, she turned into such a bewitching beauty that every wild young man of Madrid, and some that weren't so wild, fell in love with her.

Eventually Queen Isabella of Spain appointed charming Eugenie as one of her maids-of-honor. The Queen learned that her new attendant was very fond of moonlight strolls. Every night she went walking—not alone, but with a certain young page. Isabella, though not strait-laced in any way, disapproved of her every act.

Grand parties were the vogue at the palace, Eugenie's toilettes were the rage of Paris. Her equities, when she went riding, was magnificent. She was as extravagant as she pleased, and Napoleon highly approved of her every act.

The Empress who set the styles in fashions had a wayward streak that liked adventure. One time, while at Fontainebleau, she decided to go to a rustic dance in the village. She told one of her ladies-in-waiting about it and the woman got two peasant costumes. That night she drove to a hut in the woods, changed her clothes and entered the dance tent to mingle with the dancing peasants.

Some of the peasants tried to make them dance. The shining, lovely Empress wouldn't. When she remembered. . . . But she was an Empress. The court shook its head. It was agreed that the Empress Eugenie was over-riding entirely too many conventions.

Meantime Eugenie was fascinated by clothes. The craving for pleasure was excessive. The gayer and more daring court life became, the more luxurious the costumes were. Eugenie's dressmaker, when she talked about the freedom in manners and conversation at the court where Louis Napoleon and Eugenie were the reigning monarchs.

Eugenie had been fond of designing startling costumes when she was a girl. As soon as she got on the throne she decided to be the queen of fashion, too. She got to work on the hats.

FIRST, she set the neck free by doing away with the stiff type of headgear that hung down on the neck and shoulders so inconveniently. Awkward hats disappeared.

wanted everyone around her to decide to enter a convent. An aged dame, who was entertaining him, decided that Eugenie wasn't the type. She told her that she was born to grace a throne, not a cloister, so the future Empress of France, who was destined to have a hat named for her, went back to the mode to find a husband with a crown.

Nobody knows when Louis Napoleon met Eugenie. Some say that it was in 1847-48, just after she and her mother had left the court and Madrid.

Napoleon had been a harum-scurum sort of youth who used to hide down the streets, shooting, jumping fences, smiling at pretty girls. He was rather small and not very talkative.

Mile de Montijo, as Eugenie was known before her marriage, wanted to marry Napoleon and he tried to wait for Alibi's answer.

He asked for Francesca. The tempestuous maiden with the flame-red hair immediately took poison. She didn't die, although she was ill for a long time, and she didn't forget the Duke of Alba, either. To keep from remembering she threw herself into every pleasure that came along.

Eugenie galloped through the streets of Madrid, on her horse, smoking cigarettes and cigars and followed by the young bloods of the city—which could hardly be called an old-fashioned touch. She went to the bull fights, flirted with the toreadors, and presented them with red caps embroidered in gold. wanted everyone around her to decide to enter a convent. An aged dame, who was entertaining him, decided that Eugenie wasn't the type. She told her that she was born to grace a throne, not a cloister, so the future Empress of France, who was destined to have a hat named for her, went back to the mode to find a husband with a crown.

Nobody knows when Louis Napoleon met Eugenie. Some say that it was in 1847-48, just after she and her mother had left the court and Madrid.

Napoleon had been a harum-scurum sort of youth who used to hide down the streets, shooting, jumping fences, smiling at pretty girls. He was rather small and not very talkative.

Mile de Montijo, as Eugenie was known before her marriage, wanted to marry Napoleon and he tried to wait for Alibi's answer.

He asked for Francesca. The tempestuous maiden with the flame-red hair immediately took poison. She didn't die, although she was ill for a long time, and she didn't forget the Duke of Alba, either. To keep from remembering she threw herself into every pleasure that came along.

Eugenie galloped through the streets of Madrid, on her horse, smoking cigarettes and cigars and followed by the young bloods of the city—which could hardly be called an old-fashioned touch. She went to the bull fights, flirted with the toreadors, and presented them with red caps embroidered in gold. She carried a sharp-pointed dagger in her belt, which is a little more advanced than anything the present offers. All in all, she turned into such a bewitching beauty that every wild young man of Madrid, and some that weren't so wild, fell in love with her.

Eventually Queen Isabella of Spain appointed charming Eugenie as one of her maids-of-honor. The Queen learned that her new attendant was very fond of moonlight strolls. Every night she went walking—not alone, but with a certain young page. Isabella, though not strait-laced in any way, disapproved of her every act.

Grand parties were the vogue at the palace, Eugenie's toilettes were the rage of Paris. Her equities, when she went riding, was magnificent. She was as extravagant as she pleased, and Napoleon highly approved of her every act.

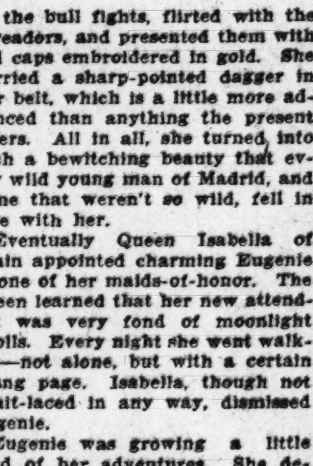

The Empress who set the styles in fashions had a wayward streak that liked adventure. One time, while at Fontainebleau, she decided to go to a rustic dance in the village. She told one of her ladies-in-waiting about it and the woman got two peasant costumes. That night she drove to a hut in the woods, changed her clothes and entered the dance tent to mingle with the dancing peasants.

Some of the peasants tried to make them dance. The shining, lovely Empress wouldn't. When she remembered. . . . But she was an Empress. The court shook its head. It was agreed that the Empress Eugenie was over-riding entirely too many conventions.

Meantime Eugenie was fascinated by clothes. The craving for pleasure was excessive. The gayer and more daring court life became, the more luxurious the costumes were. Eugenie's dressmaker, when she talked about the freedom in manners and conversation at the court where Louis Napoleon and Eugenie were the reigning monarchs.

Eugenie had been fond of designing startling costumes when she was a girl. As soon as she got on the throne she decided to be the queen of fashion, too. She got to work on the hats.

FIRST, she set the neck free by doing away with the stiff type of headgear that hung down on the neck and shoulders so inconveniently. Awkward hats disappeared.

The Empress and the famous curls, which were a boon to wig makers, for they were as popular as the hats, and all women could not grow them.

peared. In their place, she originated a hood which served as a setting to the face—the Queen Eugenie hat.

Twice a year Eugenie looked over her complete wardrobe. She started, the changeability of style that sways the fashion world today. It was said that she never wore the same costume twice.

A whole row of feminine foibles followed the wearing of the Queen Eugenie hat. Eugenie herself had shining red hair. Others wanted it. Thus hair dyes came in.

Eugenie had plenty of hair for curls which she draped at her neck. Less fortunate women had to buy theirs. False hair resulted. Eugenie curls sold by the thousands.

Eugenie penciled her eyebrows black, so other women did the same. The custom was old in Spain. Eugenie's own bright eyes didn't need a stimulant, but the women who wanted the same kind of light in theirs got to using belladonna.

The quiet charm that somehow Europe.

other has attached itself to old-fashioned clothes is a myth. Empress Eugenie, for all her brilliance, sartorially speaking, was more alert politically than the so-called modernists. She knew every political move. When Napoleon's health gave way in 1855, she got him to entrust her with the French Government and was even made regent. Eugenie, waving a political scepter in one hand and a fashion scepter in the other, destroyed the empire and nearly ruined France.

Eugenie's downfall came after her husband was defeated by the Germans in the Franco-Prussian war, and he was captured at Sedan. The Empress Eugenie fled to England, the brilliant court disappeared, and France was torn by mob scenes as the revolutionists destroyed the second empire and set up the Commune.

Say what you please of its old-fashioned charm, Eugenie's hat stirred up a world of trouble for Europe.

DAILY STORY FOR CHILDREN

By Mary Graham Bonner

Early Seamen

THEY kept very quiet, for the Little Black Clock said that he thought it would be more interesting to hear what was being said than anything else.

Of course, because of the Clock's magic, they would understand all languages, and yet when they were not with the Little Black Clock they could not understand any language except their own.

The women on this old vessel were talking about the winds while John and Peggy knew were called the Trade Winds.

But the seamen did not call them trade winds. Instead they thought they were evil spirits and were afraid that harm would come to them because of these winds.

"Doesn't that seem absurd?" asked John. "I wouldn't be frightened if I were in their places."

"No," agreed the Little Black Clock. "I suppose not. But you know, too, that in these early days very little was known about the ocean. These steadily blowing trade winds seem strange to these early seamen. I have turned the time very, very far back, long before the trade winds were called trade winds."

"Weren't they always called trade winds?" John asked.

"Oh no," said the Little Black Clock. "The first name they were received was that of 'Ladies' Sails.' And perhaps Peggy would like to know the reason why."

"Not only Peggy, but John, was
